From the Top Shelf

A message from Stephen Fulchino, Library Director

Request for Information

The New Bedford Free Public Library is changing the way it notifies users of items that are available for pickup (known in library jargon as “holds”) and overdue items. Instead of mailing printed notices, the Library will be contacting users in one of three ways that you are able to choose: by text message, by email, or by automated telephone call.

In order to do this, beginning Monday, June 11th, Library staff will be asking users at checkout which method they want to use. Please be ready to make a choice. This is also an opportunity to ensure that we have your correct information on file.

This program, which is being instituted by our library network SAILS, has two major benefits:

- It saves the City money. The cost of the new service is considerably less than the cost of postage for notices that the Library sends out.
- It saves the staff time. At present, Library staff calls users for holds and has to prepare overdue notices for mailing. That will end, which will allow more time for the staff to serve the public in a direct manner.

Of course, using less paper is also environmentally friendly.

Please note that by law final notices – also known as bills – have to be in written form and will continue to be mailed.

A few weeks after June 11th, you may also go to the Library Web site, www.newbedfordlibrary.org, to fill out a form with the contact method you would like us to use.

Please help us save the City money.
